

HILLS...HILLS...HILLS...HILLS...HILLS...HILLS...HILLS

A folksy way of saying something is worthless is to say it is "not worth a hill of beans." Draw something that a friend thinks is valuable but that you don't think is worth a hill of beans.

"Blue are the hills that are far away" is a proverb with two meanings. It means that things look better when viewed from a distance in either time or space. What have you seen today that would look better from a distance?

"To make a mountain out of a molehill" is a cliché that means someone makes something seem more important than it is. Create new clichés that would have the same meaning. For example, "to make a milk cow out of a milkshake" could have a similar meaning.

To make a _____ out of a _____

To make a _____ out of a _____

To make a _____ out of a _____

To make a _____ out of a _____

To make a _____ out of a _____

To make a _____ out of a _____

What has happened to you this year that won't seem as bad when you remember it five years from now?